Venture Studio Overview

What is a Venture Studio?

A Venture Studio builds a company from the beginning, starting with the ideation phase. It conducts proof of concept by leveraging its network to test products. Throughout this process, the studio can fund further growth, either internally or through its network of investors.

Studios Accelerate the Speed of Growth

Common Operating Models

1

In-house ideation process led by a group of experts to identify problems and potential solutions within their area of expertise.

2

Partnerships with hospitals and corporations to share IP and grow businesses together. Utilizes these partnerships to beta test company ideas

3

Co-Invest opportunities with venture funds managed internally or externally

Key Venture Studio Models

External Venture Fund

Description:
Has a Venture Fund that is used to invest in external investments and can invest in internal portfolio companies

Examples:

Corporate Partner

Description:
Works with Corporate to create ideas and solve pain points and then spins out into companies

Examples:

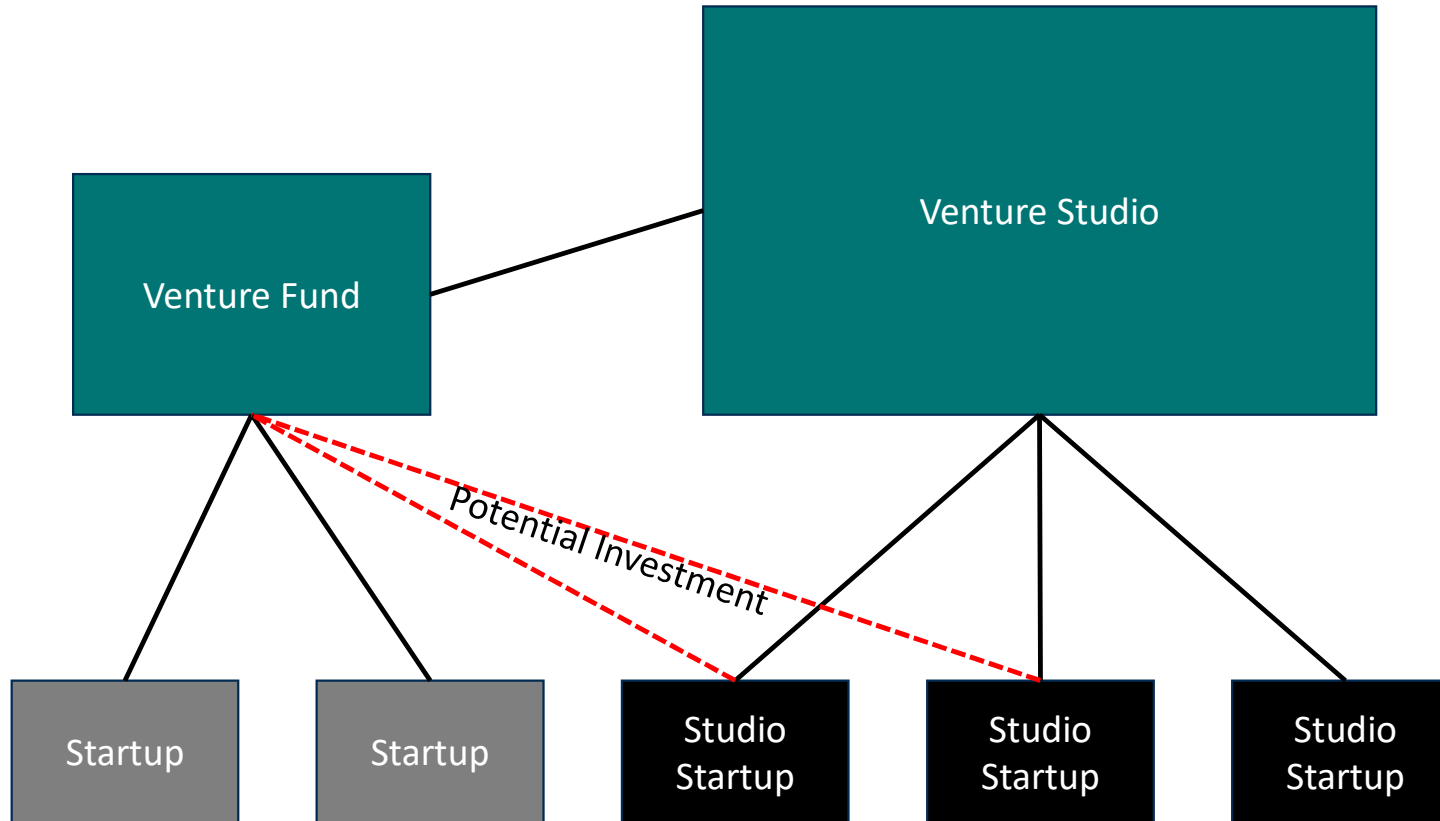

Hospital Partner

Description:
Works with Hospitals to create ideas and solve pain points and then spins out into companies

Examples:

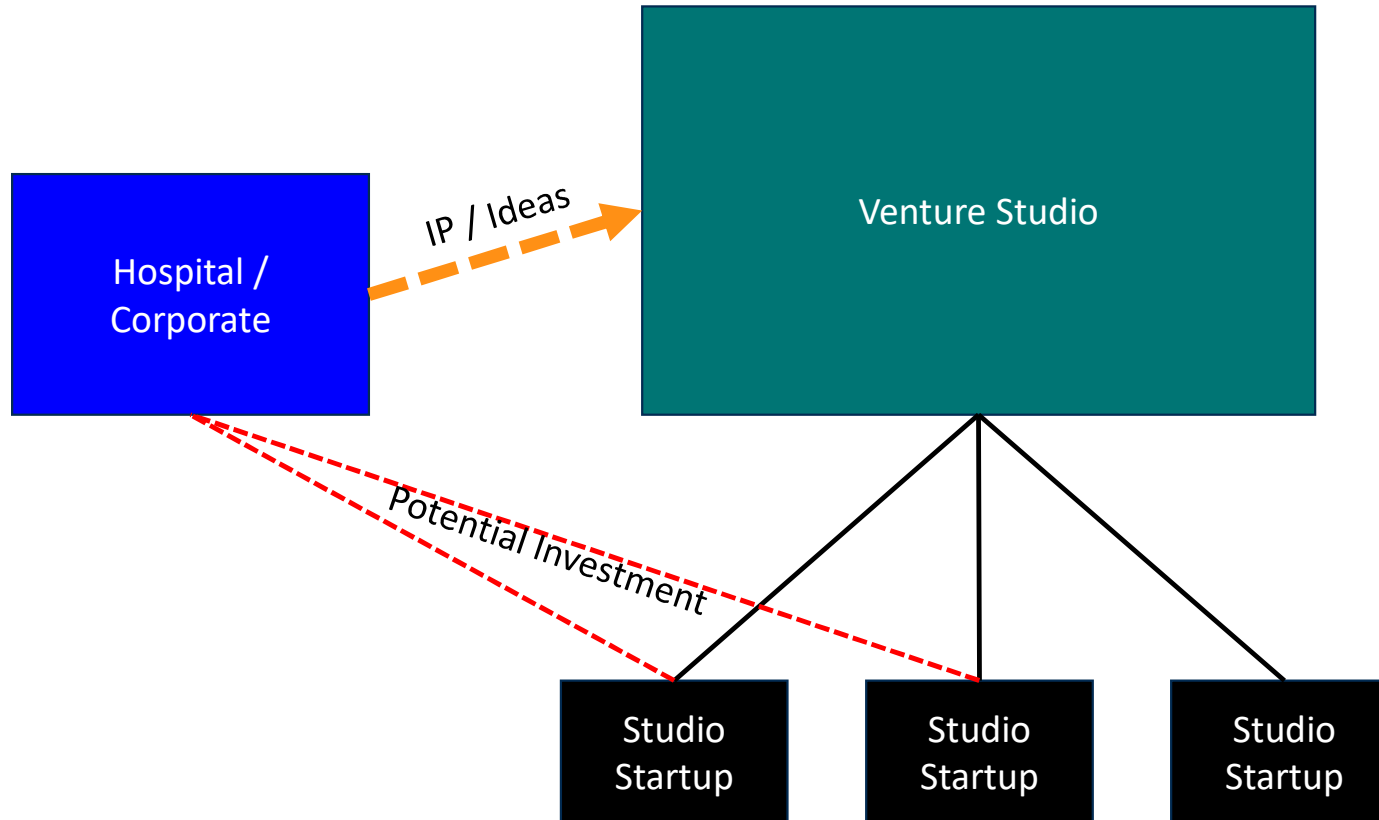

Venture Fund Sidecar Model

- Venture Studios can utilize their sidecar fund along with external venture funds to help further potential returns
- The funds make outside venture investments and depending on the studio, can also invest in internal venture studio portfolio companies
- This internal investment can create a potential governance issue as the studio invests in their own creations

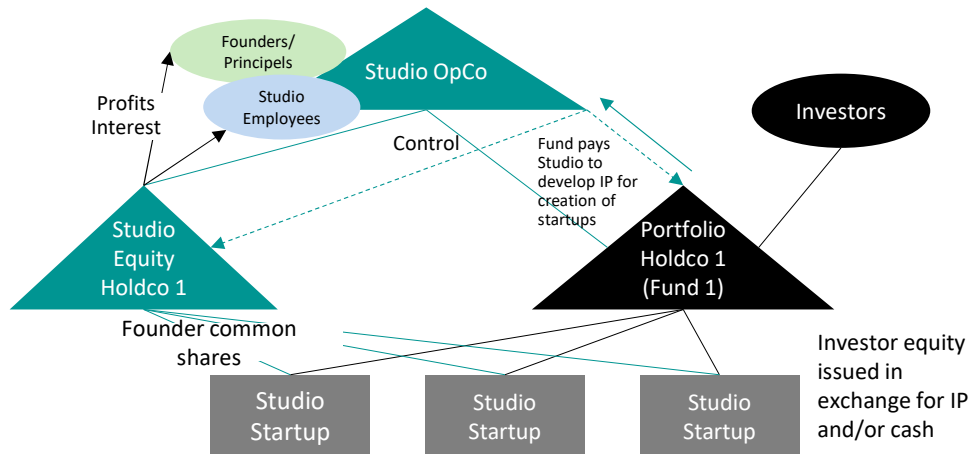

Hospital / Corporate Partner Model

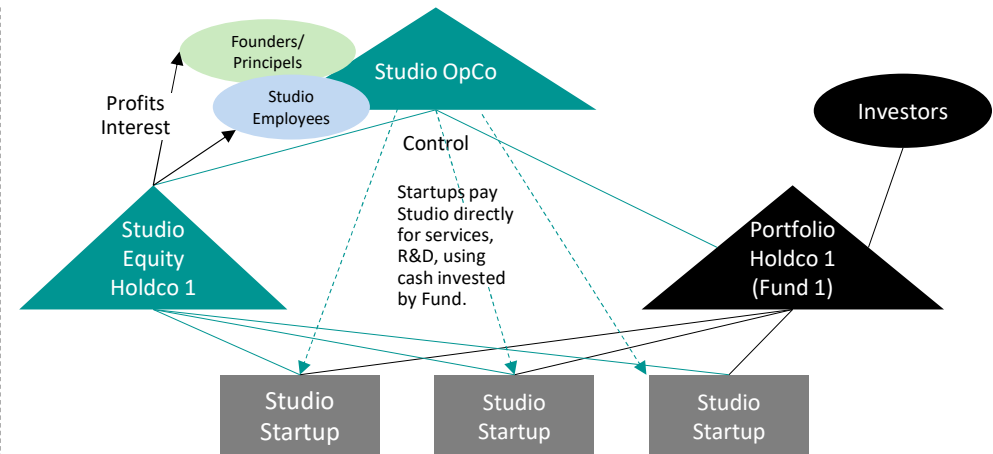

- Venture Studios can partner with Hospitals or Corporates to help with ideation
- These partners provide IP / Ideas to the Venture Studio to build companies around
- Once the portfolio company begins to look for funding, oftentimes the partner has the first right of refusal to invest

Venture Studio Models
